

THE WOOD RELIGION LECTURE SERIES
DEPARTMENT OF RELIGION

David Chidester

“Blood and Money: Elementary Forms of the Political Economy of the Sacred”

(Tom Phillips, Slegs vir Almal, 1974)

David Chidester is Professor of Comparative Religion, co-Director of the International Human Rights Exchange, and Director of the Institute for Comparative Religion in Southern Africa at the University of Cape Town, South Africa. He has written extensively on religion and violence, sacred space, and the inseparability of politics and religion. His publications include among others Savage Systems: Colonialism and Comparative Religion in Southern Africa, American Sacred Space, Shots in the Streets: Violence and Religion in South Africa, and Salvation and Suicide: An Interpretation of Jim Jones, the Peoples Temple, and Jonestown.

Wednesday, November 20, 5:00pm
Taylor 203