

The Department of Religion Presents
the 2014 Annual Frederic C. Wood Lecture

Everyday mass media bombards people with messages designed to influence their ideas, choices and even desires. Today's need for critical analysis may be greater than many people are willing to admit. This lecture will address the pivotal role of liberal education in placing true liberty at the center of our civilization, and how the decline of the liberal arts threatens the very liberties history's great liberal artists worked to establish.

The Arts of Freedom: Protecting the Mind in an Age of Mass Media
